

Come on plumbers, pull your finger out and make a difference.

The CP961® is a truly remarkable isolation valve. It saves water, energy and as a result money. Clear and attractive benefits to the consumer. Ok it costs more than an ordinary valve but then again it has the potential to return more. However all of this is a mere pipe dream unless the homeowner is made aware of the advantages of fitting the CP961®

Which is where you, the plumber comes in. You can make a difference in peoples homes, helping them save water, energy and money whilst making a valuable contribution to the environment. Think it's too big a claim? Then think again as this little device has already been adopted by architects who are seeing the returns from specifying the CP961®

Now's it's down to you to do your bit. Make sure you're not the one blocking this valve from doing its job. Next time you have to fit an isolation valve why not substitute it for a CP961® and see a greater return for your efforts.
